Free POS Software is a Recipe for Small Restaurant Success

March 9, 2012 – POSLavu, the original iPad® Point of sale for restaurants is now available with zero up-front licensing costs thanks to a new partnership with payment processor, Century Payments. The program was developed in order to provide restaurants with limited resources an opportunity to leverage the power of a full-featured POS system without the usual cost.

POSLavu is a wireless point of sale application that operates seamlessly on an Apple iPad®, iPod Touch® and iPhones®. It is a robust application that can customize menus, manage seating, take meal orders, swipe credit cards tableside, split checks, email receipts to customers and compile a number of reports for restaurant management.

"POSLavu has always been a low-cost alternative to traditional point of sale systems" said Travis Kellerman, Senior Vice President of Operations for LAVU, Inc. "But now we're now pleased to offer our full-function Silver level software with no license fee. Compared to other "free" software that offers limited functions, POSLavu gives you a true business management system."

The POSLavu Silver Package is now offered without the normal $895 licensing fee when it's paired with Century Payments credit card processing service. The Silver Package is often used in a quick serve restaurant environment, such as coffee shops, counter service, food trucks and mobile cafes.

"We are pleased to partner with POSLavu to provide their customers with a convenient and reliable electronic payment option," said Christian Campbell, Executive Vice President of Business Development for Century Payments. "POSLavu's focus is about providing a low-cost alternative to traditional point of sale systems. With the addition of our Merchant Services partnership, customers will be able to get all the resources they need to effectively run their business. All of us at Century Payments are honored to partner with POSLavu and their clients."
